Background to Your Lead & Manage Assessment

This assessment is based on the widely recognised model of Situational or Adaptive Style Leadership.

Adaptive Leadership is the adjustment of a leadership style to specific situations to reflect employee needs (Robbins and DeCenzo, 1998). According to this model, there is no one best leadership style for all situations. An effective leader has an understanding of their natural leadership style and will adapt this to best suit the needs of the employees and the organisation as well as their current work environment.

To effectively adjust your leadership style, you need to build an awareness of your natural leadership style.

This assessment draws on the distinction between a Manager and Leader, in order to help you identify your natural style and improve your success as a leader.

Introduction to Your Lead & Manage Assessment

Sam, you may have realised that your success as a leader or manager is determined to a great extent by how well you interact with your employees and other people.

You might have noticed it is very easy to get along with certain people. You almost instantly and effortlessly understand the other person and the communication just flows.

However, with some people, interactions take more effort and they do not flow as easily. You may also have an uncomfortable feeling that the other person is experiencing the same thing. You are likely to feel disappointed, frustrated and even tired. Communicating takes energy, effort and concentration.

Sam, this Lead & Manage Assessment will provide you with a map for more successful interactions with others in your Leadership Role.

Extended DISC® Model Overview

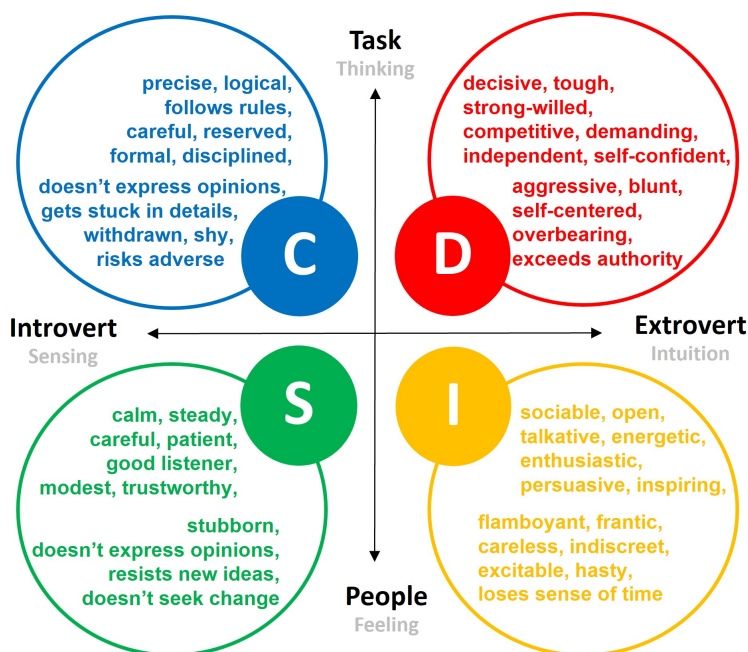

Your Leadership Assessment is based on behavioural theories that have been used since 1880. The power of this model is that it is easy to learn, understand and use because it identifies four behavioural styles.

People can be divided into four main styles by identifying if they are more:

- 1. People orientated or Task orientated, or
- 2. Reserved or Active

The resulting four styles are called:

- D-style (Dominance)
- I-style (Influence)
- S-style (Steadiness)
- C-style (Compliance)

Your Behavioural Profiles

The Profiles are a visual representation of your behavioural style. They are based on your responses to the questionnaire. There are no right or wrong answers.

Profile I: Perceived Need to Adjust - Your adjusted style shows how you believe you must adjust to meet the demands of your present environment.

Profile II: Natural Style - Your natural style remains fairly stable, but not rigid, over your adult life. It is the style that is most comfortable for you and uses the least energy. Most individuals are a combination of styles.

The styles (D, I, S, and C) that are above the middle line (top half of the Profile II) are your natural styles. The styles that sit below the middle line require more energy from you.

There are no good or bad behavioural styles - just different ones

Your DISC style is: IDS (I - 40%, D - 35%, S - 25%)

Profile I - Perceived Need to Adjust

Profile II - Natural Style

Your DISC Style

The DISC Model is divided into four areas on the Diamond: D, I, S and C. Within each quadrant there are 40 segments adding up to 160 different behavioural styles.

- The coloured area represents your most natural behavioural style. These are the behaviours which require the least energy from you.
- The DISC quadrant(s) that have a darker grey shading represent your natural flexibility zone/the area where your profile is most likely to shift.
- The DISC quadrants(s) that have a lighter grey shading represent your easiest development zone/the areas toward which your profile is easiest to develop.
- The DISC quadrant(s) that have no shading represent your most difficult development zone requiring more energy from you.

On the Diamond below we have identified management and leadership cultures. Your most natural style is situated on the Diamond above in relation to the leadership and management cultures below.

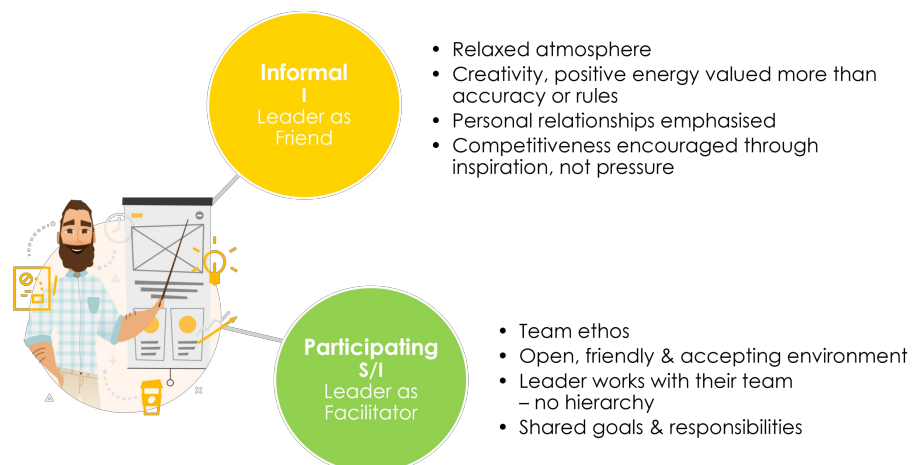

Management / Leadership Cultures of the Styles

Positioned around the Diamond on the previous page, you can see that we have identified different leadership cultures. Understanding where these fit on the quadrant also helps an individual to understand why their leadership culture is the way it is.

Authoritative Leadership (D style) and Change Leadership (D/I style)

Informal Leadership (I style) and Participating Leadership (I/S style)

Sam at a glance

This page is a description of how your employees and others are likely to perceive you. While the text describes your typical behaviour as seen by others, you can certainly modify your behaviour to fit the needs of a particular situation and/or individual(s). Also, you may have already addressed the development areas by learning new skills.

How your Employees may perceive you:

Social, pleasant, sociable, thorough, organised, goal-oriented, ambitious, independent, emotionally unyielding, nice, easy to approach, people-oriented.

Sam's strengths:

- Is competitive in a people-oriented way
- Can keep people motivated
- Doesn't crush others when changing things
- Takes notice of emotions
- Can generate ideas
- Has a longer perspective in perceiving things
- Can sell one's ideas to others
- Dares to work without instructions
- Is encouraging and positive
- Can be patient
- Does what is best for the team
- Likes people

Managerial Style

There is no one best Management Style. However, successful professionals often have certain things in common. Managers are often responsible for maintaining routines, managing individual performance and facilitating group performance. They focus on results, supervision, organisation, and performance.

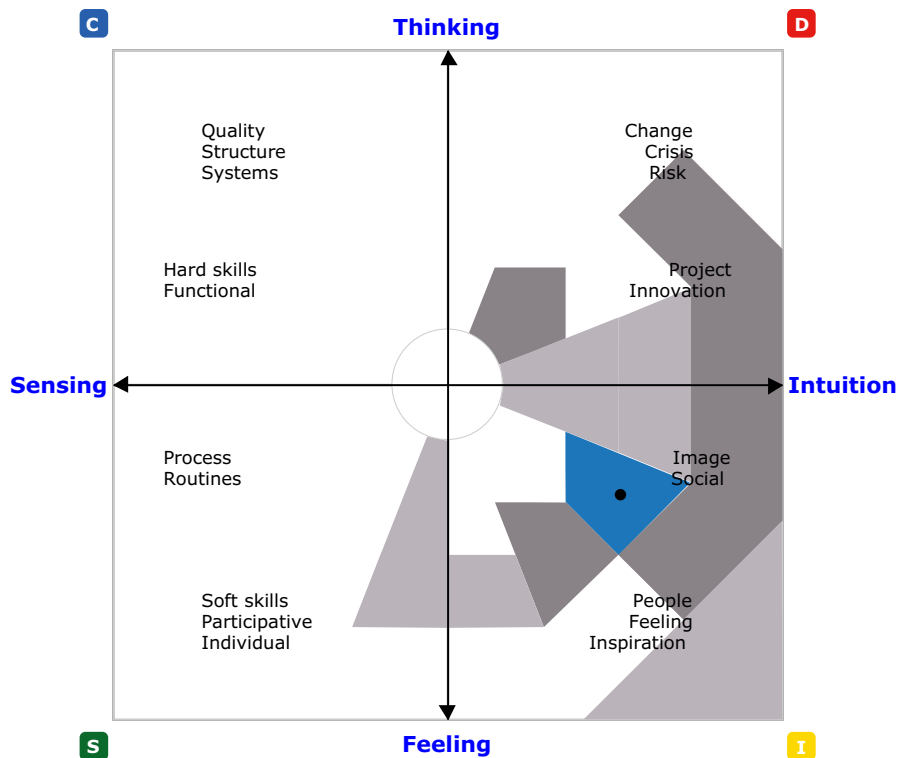

Managers are usually more task focused and tend to plan, organise and coordinate to achieve results. Characteristics of your Management Style include:

- The ability to carry out projects that need to be done in a systematic and structured manner
- Effective Management in crisis and emergency situations
- The ability to achieve short-term goals quickly
- The ability to deliver consistent results
- The ability to maintain established procedures across the organisation

Management Diamond

The Management Diamond includes generic text related to the various management behaviours of the different styles.

Your most natural behavioural style is represented by the coloured area together with your flexibility zones, represented by the shaded areas.

Competency Reading Instructions

Each competency has been graded on a scale from -5 to 0 or 0 to +5. A score of 2 or more means this competency requires very little energy from you. If you score from -1 to 1, this area can be developed with a little energy. A grade below -1 means this competency would require more energy.

As with the Flexibility Diamond, this does not mean you are not capable of it, but simply that it would require more energy. This is not a "can or cannot" scale.

Each category below displays your top and bottom five competencies in each area, based on your natural behavioural style.

Leaders

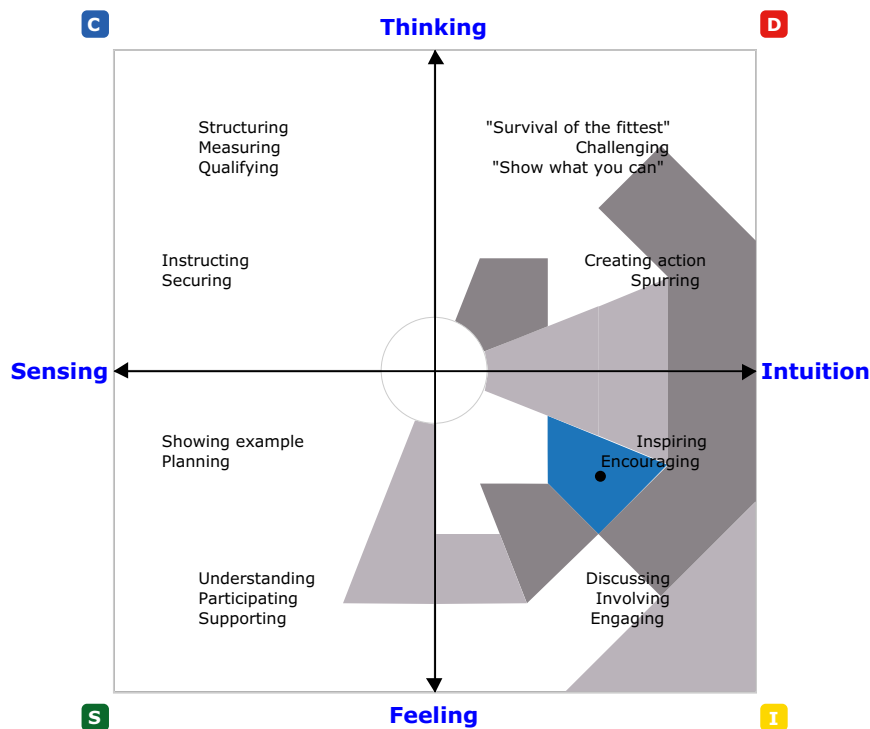

There is no one best Leadership Style. However, successful professionals often have certain characteristics in common. Leaders are more people focused and tend to inspire and motivate others to high levels of performance and success. They are generally energetic, enthusiastic, and passionate.

- Inspirational Motivation: Leaders promote a consistent vision and a set of values to the team. They guide their team by providing them with a sense of meaning and challenge. They work enthusiastically and optimistically to foster the spirit of teamwork and commitment.
- Intellectual Stimulation: Such leaders encourage their team to be innovative and creative. They encourage new ideas from team members and never criticise them publicly for mistakes they've made.
- Idealised Influence: Leaders influence through action. They act as role models that their team seek to emulate.
- Individualised Consideration: Leaders act as mentors to individuals and teams and reward them for creativity and innovation. The individuals being mentored are empowered to make decisions and are always provided with the support required to implement their decisions.

How You Help Your Employees Achieve Their Goals

Interpreting the bar graphs is simple:

The boxes to the right side of the graph identify how you like to help your employees achieve their goals. These methods require very little energy from you.

The boxes to the left side of the graph identify methods that would require more energy from you. You CAN use these methods, but they are likely to require more energy and concentration.

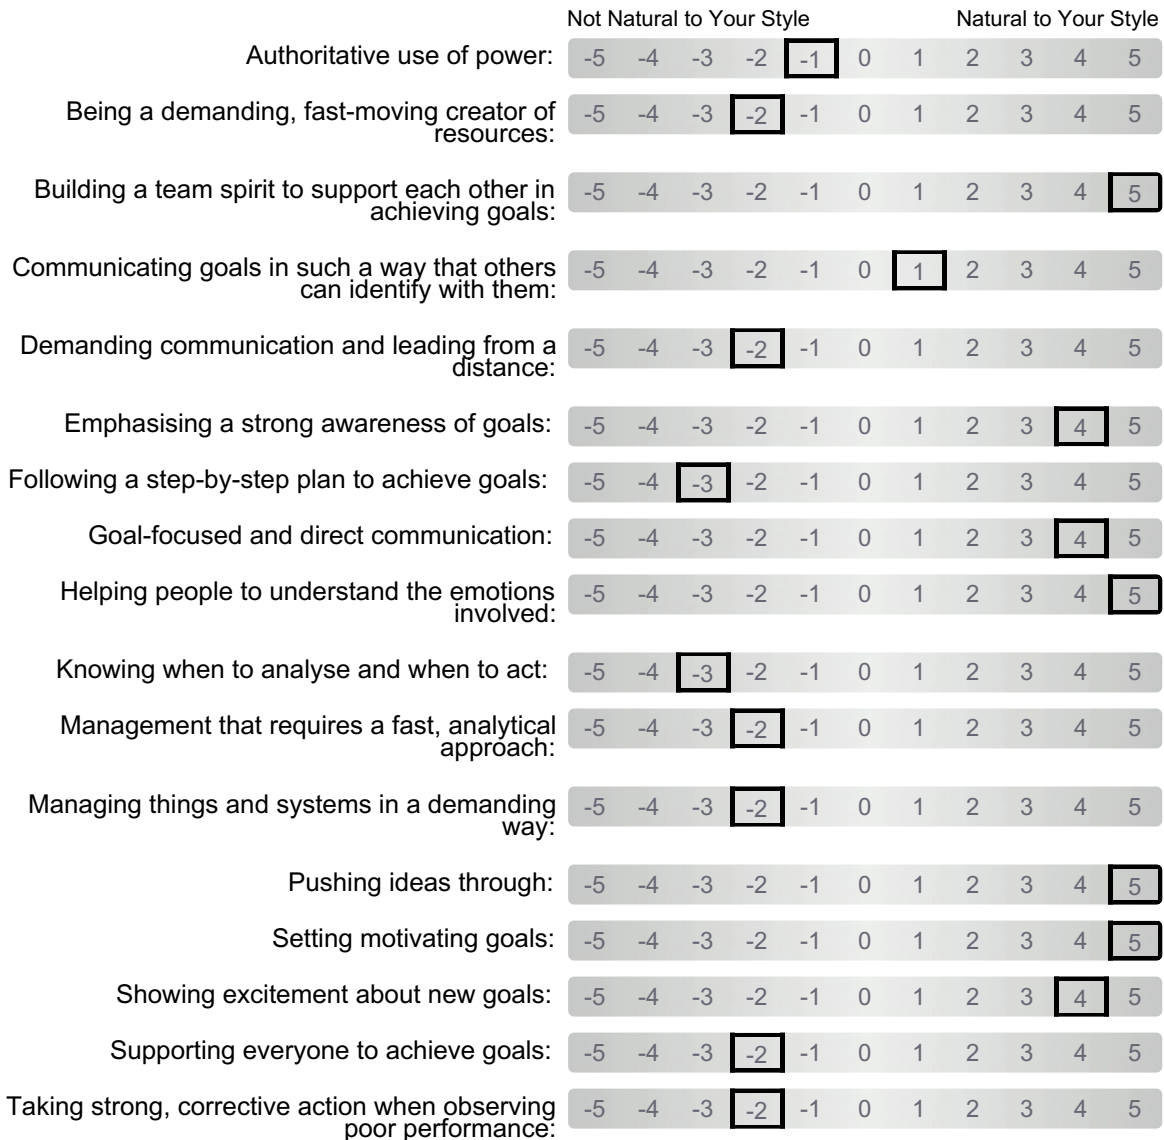

How You Achieve Your Goals

Interpreting the bar graphs is simple:

The boxes to the right side of the graph identify how you prefer to achieve your goals. These items require very little energy from you.

The boxes to the left side of the graph identify items requiring more energy from you. You CAN achieve your goals in these ways, but doing so is likely to require more energy and concentration.

Your Decision Making Style

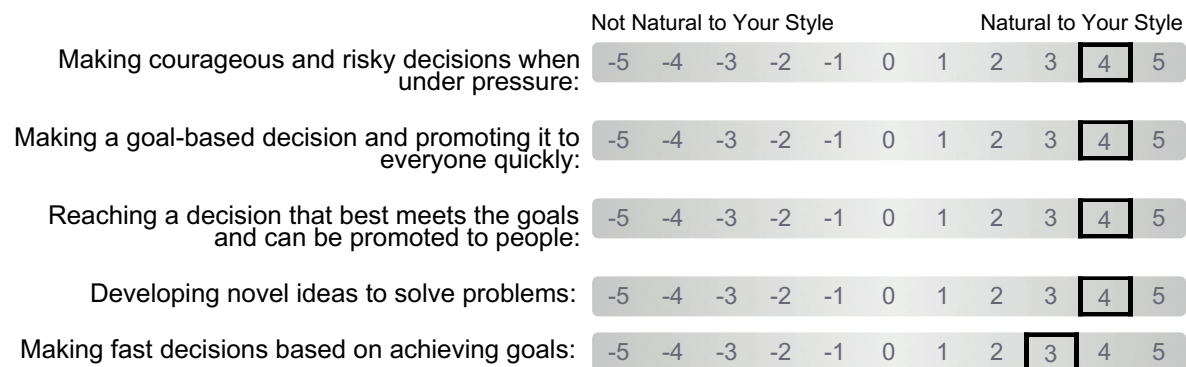

There is no best style for making decisions. However, we all have our own most comfortable way of decision making. Successful people are aware of their preferred style and make conscious adjustments based on the requirements of each unique situation. Listed in the bar graphs below are a few of the most commonly recognised decision making traits. Interpreting the bar graphs is simple:

The boxes to the right side of the graph identify your preferred decision making styles. Be careful not to overuse them.

The boxes to the left side of the graph identify decision making styles requiring more energy from you. You CAN make decisions in these ways as long as you concentrate more.

Please note: The competency groups display your top and bottom five behavioural competencies.

Decision Making Strengths

Decision Making Development Areas

How Your Employees View your Decision Making Style

No matter what you do, others will have their own perceptions of your behaviour.

Sam, this is how your decision making style may come across to your employees.

He can certainly be a good, deliberate decision maker in his field. In new matters, he may superficially analyse the facts and to some extent trusts his intuition. Sometimes he can be cheated by involving emotions.

Identify a decision making style that is very comfortable for you. What impact does it have on your current position?

Identify a decision making style that is less comfortable for you. What impact does it have in your current position? What can you do to improve?

Your Motivators

Different individuals find different processes, factors, situations in the workplace motivating.

Sam is motivated by social human contacts, good human relationships, acceptance in the team and co-operation. Actually he is not a person who could work for others, but he likes to create good environment and enjoys putting people in a good mood. He likes independence inside an organised company. Sam also needs a certain amount of freedom.

You are more likely to respond positively and feel energised if these factors are present in your work environment.

- Good and lively friends
- Positive and excited atmosphere
- Freedom in how to take care of responsibilities
- People who are easy to get involved
- Openness in communication
- Freedom from detailed tasks
- Opportunity to join in
- Free discussion
- Lofty ideas and changes to work with them
- Having own opinion been heard
- New opportunities
- Positive way to promote things

Identify two Motivators that are present in your current position.

1 _____

2 _____

How can you increase their effect on your performance? Be specific.

Situations that Reduce Your Motivation

All of us face situations on a daily basis that we do not like much and that tend to drain our energy levels. The factors below are likely to decrease your motivation and require more energy from you.

This type of person does not like strict instructions nor chains that make his work boring and limited. He does not like an exaggerated pedantic attitude nor faultfinders. Sam has difficulty approaching people who do not know how to have fun or cannot enjoy each others' company.

- Dryness and boredom
- Dull routines
- Being separated from people
- Progressive changes being prohibited
- Detailed instructions
- Losing popularity
- Own team breaking up
- Coldness and toughness
- Restrictions
- Facts-oriented thinking
- Getting stuck in one place
- Bad team-spirit

Carefully consider the Situations that Reduce Your Motivation. Be aware of their impact on making your goals a reality. Are you prone to procrastinate in situations/tasks that correspond to the factors listed above?

From the Situations that Reduce Your Motivation listed above, identify the two that constitute the greatest challenge in your current position.

1 _____

2 _____

How can you decrease their effect on your performance? Be specific.

Your Verbal Communication Style

We all have our own unique communication styles. When we become aware of how we tend to communicate with others, it becomes easier to make conscious modifications to our style. These modifications improve our effectiveness with others.

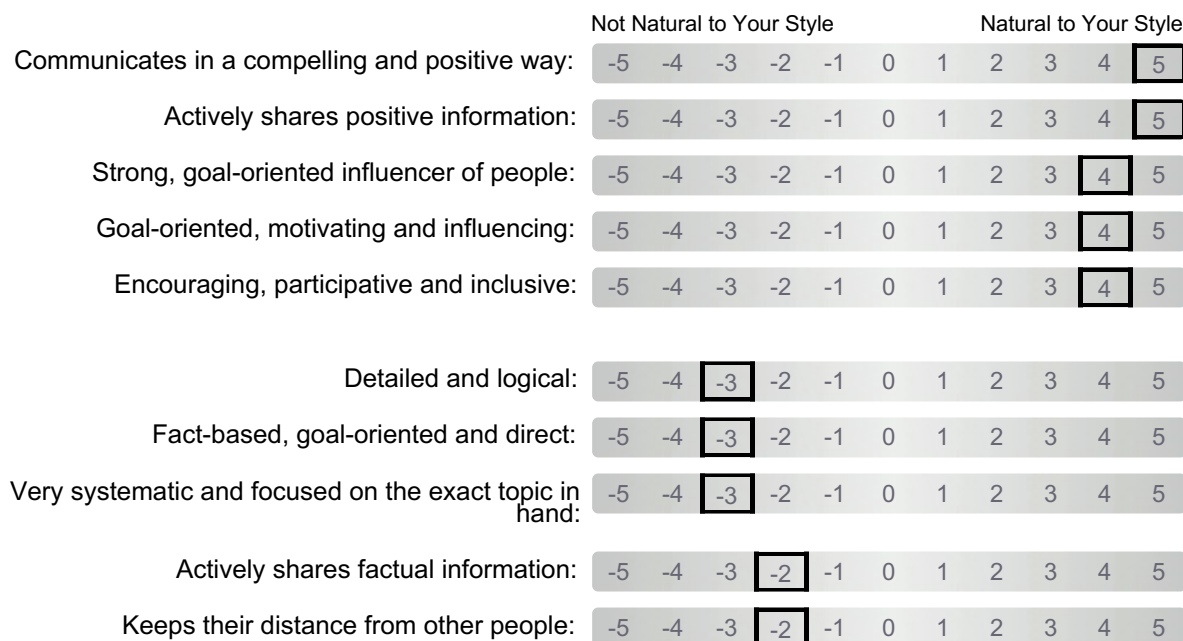

Interpreting the bar graphs is simple:

The boxes to the right side of the graph identify your preferred communication styles. Be careful not to overuse them.

The boxes to the left side of the graph identify communication styles requiring more energy from you. You CAN communicate in these ways, but they may require more energy and concentration.

Please note: The competency group displays your top and bottom five behavioural competencies.

This person has sometimes been described as a pleasant, people-oriented but purposeful conversationalist. He is able to encourage and inspire people, take the team's interest into account and guide his team towards the goal. He is not so receptive a listener as he seems.

How Others View Your Communication Style

Your message and your communication style come across differently to different people. While you cannot control others, you can be more aware of your natural communication style and how it is perceived by others. Then you can make the necessary adjustments in your interactions with others.

Sam, this is how others may perceive your communication style.

This person has sometimes been described as a pleasant, people-oriented but purposeful conversationalist. He is able to encourage and inspire people, take the team's interest into account and guide his team towards the goal. He is not so receptive a listener as he seems.

Increasing Your Success As A Leader

Sam, there are a few reminders and suggestions below on how you could further increase your success as a Leader.

Reminders & Suggestions:

- Try to keep your written communication as matter-of-fact as possible
- Learn to find errors - and do something about them
- Learn to ask for and listen to feedback about what you say
- Make sure you have a detailed follow-up system - and that everybody is aware of it
- Create a system that identifies problems when they occur
- Go to the trouble of writing down how things should be done
- Set aside time for people who demand more information

- Spend less time with people than you would like to
- Do not take quality for granted - create a system that rewards quality
- Interfere with the experts' work as little as possible
- Do not assume that policies and procedures on quality are enough to achieve quality
- Be careful not to implement bigger and bigger changes
- Encourage employees to analyse their own situation without saying what you think it is
- Do not make people compete too much
